SILVER ANNIVERSARY 25 FACTS ABOUT GEM

Think back to 1999 – 25 years ago. There was panic about the Y2K bug as the world approached the year 2000. The BlackBerry smartphone was launched; iPhones weren't even a thought.

The Euro currency was just being introduced, while Tony Blair, Bill Clinton, Nelson Mandela and Jiang Zemin were in power.

In the world of entrepreneurship research, it was not simply “business as usual”. The first Global Entrepreneurship Monitor (GEM) report was published, marking the beginning of a revolution in entrepreneurship research.

Over the next quarter century, a GEM Global Report was published each year, as well as a plethora of National and Special Topic Reports. The vast troves of valuable data and insights from GEM have impacted thousands of policymakers, academics, international organizations and entrepreneurs around the globe.

On the occasion of GEM's silver anniversary, here are 25 facts about what is today the world's foremost study of entrepreneurship.

BEGINNINGS

1. Bill Bygrave from Babson College and Michael Hay from London Business School joined forces to co-create GEM.

Michael Hay, London Business School

2. GEM brought a unique approach as the only global research source that collects data directly from the source – entrepreneurs.

3. The founders of GEM provided the first and only source that gathers and analyses data on the average state of the business environment for starting new businesses in participating countries.

4. The initial GEM report in 1999 included data collected by 10 pioneering National Teams: GEM Canada, GEM Denmark, GEM Finland, GEM France, GEM Germany, GEM Japan, GEM Israel, GEM Italy, GEM United Kingdom and GEM United States.

First GEM Meeting

5. The authors of the first GEM report were Paul D. Reynolds of Babson College, Michael Hay of London Business School and S. Michael Camp of the Kauffman Center for Entrepreneurial Leadership.

THE EVOLUTION OF A PROJECT

6. In 2004, the first GEM Special Topic Report was published. The GEM 2004 Financing Report reviewed the state of financing for entrepreneurs and their ventures around the world.

7. In 2007, the first GEM report dedicated exclusively to women's entrepreneurship was published. Several women's entrepreneurship reports have been published since then. In 2019, the decision was taken to publish a GEM women's entrepreneurship report every year, given the importance of this priority topic.

8. Other Special Topics over the past quarter century include Education and Training, Family Entrepreneurship, Youth Entrepreneurship and Regional Reports, among others.

9. Beginning with the 2015/2016 Global Report, each economy's country profile was highlighted with a breakdown of key entrepreneurial data.

10. In 2019, GEM's National Entrepreneurship Context Index (NECI) was launched. The NECI evaluates the entrepreneurial context of a particular economy. Results are based on the scores provided by national experts to a set of Entrepreneurial Framework Conditions for each GEM participating economy in a given year. The number one NECI countries have been the United Arab Emirates (2021/2022 and 2022/2023 Global Reports), Indonesia (2020/2021) and Switzerland (2019/2020).
